How do You Plan to Celebrate Eeyore's Birthday?

What, you mean you don't already have April 30, Eeyore's birthday, circled on your calendar? No party plans or guest list, either?

Don't worry, neither do we. But as we were scanning the list of April special days and observances on the About Parenting website, that particular item caught our interest. Why? Because of that taciturn donkey's signature phrase: "Thanks for noticing me."

Right then, it hit us: isn't that exactly what symptoms of plumbing problems are saying to you in their own way?

Take a leaking faucet, for example. Can't you almost hear it now: "Thanks for noticing and getting me fixed because otherwise, things would only have gotten worse." And he, er, it's exactly right. Plumbing problems don't fix themselves. Most of them require skilled professional assistance to make matters right again.

So with Eeyore as this month's Close to Home inspiration, here are a few additional plumbing warning signs you not only should notice, but act on right away:

Strong rotten egg smell

Natural gas leaks are often detected by their distinct rotten egg smell. Yes, it's awful, but that smell is there to save you. Natural gas is actually a colorless, odorless gas in its pure form, but a chemical called mercaptan is added to the substance so you can notice a leak when it occurs.

Rusty-looking water

If your water develops a red tinge, that might indicate corrosion inside your water heater storage tank. And if the corrosion is that far advanced, the tank could soon start leaking water.

Green & Healthy Living Tips

Breathe. Deeply. Most of us don't breathe properly – we take only shallow breathes and breathe to 1/3 of our lung capacity. A full breath is one where your lungs are completely filled, your abdomen expands and there's minimum movement in your shoulders.

The sound of running water

If you know for sure that no faucets are turned on, no toilet has recently been flushed, and that neither your dishwasher nor washing machine are running but you still hear the sound of running water, you could have a leak somewhere within your plumbing system. While higher water bills are one likely result, your problems could be far more extensive than that.

Slow-moving drains

Persistently slow drains throughout your home could be a sign that you have a clogged pipe that's preventing water and waste from flowing away from your home. There are a number of possible causes — from corroded, older pipes to tree roots compromising a main line — but whatever the reason, you'll need the help of a professional plumber to diagnose and solve the problem.

In honor of Eeyore's birthday, we'd like to offer you a token of our appreciation: a whole-house plumbing inspection for just $89 with the coupon on page 3 of this newsletter. That way, we can spot problems in the making while ensuring the efficient and safe operation of your family's plumbing systems and fixtures.

Until next time,

William Kirkorian
President

Amazing Fact

If you eat a teaspoon of sugar right after eating something spicy, the sugar will completely neutralize the heat. Jalapeno, anyone?
