Looking to Liven Things up This Thanksgiving? Try Starting a New Tradition or Two.

We're not taking sides or anything, but when it comes to voting for our favorite holiday of the year, let's just say that Thanksgiving is really, really close to the top. Just as it is for millions of people all over the country, and for all the right reasons.

And yet, as much as we all love and cling to our favorite holiday traditions, it can be fun and rewarding to broaden your repertoire, so to speak, by interjecting a new tradition or two. So, on your behalf, we've done a little research to see what kinds of fresh and new things other folks are doing around the country to spice up their Thanksgiving Day celebration. And now we're happy to share "the best and the brightest" with you:

- Thankful Tree – This is a twist on Gratitude Rolls, where family members each write out one thing they're thankful for and hang it on the Thankful Tree, which can also double as a beautiful centerpiece or wall hanging if you have a knack for decorating.
- Gratitude Rolls - As your guests arrive, have each one write what they're thankful for on a small strip of parchment paper. Then lay each strip on top of store-bought crescent dough before rolling it up and baking. When dinner's ready, family members can read out loud the messages of gratitude, in a creative twist on the "what are you thankful for" question.

Green & Healthy Living Tips

Skip the skin. Whether you eat white or dark meat, be sure to go skinless. Just one ounce of skin contains 80 calories and 2 grams of fat!

• Thanksgiving Journal - If your family isn't comfortable sharing their deepest thoughts and feelings out loud, why not pass around a Thanksgiving Journal that gets added to each year? Then you can flip back and see how your family has grown and changed throughout the years.

• Do Unto Others - Whether you decide to help out at a local shelter, collect food for a food bank, or make a family donation to those less fortunate, get your kids involved and teach them just how far random acts of kindness can go.

And Now for a Tradition That Just Won't Go Away.

Holiday shoppers may call the day after Thanksgiving Black Friday, but so do plumbers. That's because there are more clogged drains to clear that day than on any other throughout the year.

Click here for some very practical ways to keep your drains running free and clear from DIY Life.

If bad drain luck should befall you on Thanksgiving, then just give us a call and save $30 with the coupon below.

In the meantime, Happy Thanksgiving from all of us at Your 1 Plumber.

Amazing Fact

Now a Thanksgiving dinner staple, cranberries were actually used by Native Americans to treat arrowwounds and to dye clothes.
