Why Home Ownership is a Labor of Love.

Labor Day is a time-honored tradition where Americans of all backgrounds and income levels pause to reflect on the fruits of their labors and, in the process, enjoy an extra day off to celebrate their achievements.

It's a great idea, of course, and one that dates back to 1882 when the first Labor Day holiday was celebrated in New York City. The popularity of that event quickly spread and, just 12 years later,

Labor Day became a national holiday in 1894. Even U.S. territories celebrate the occasion.

Well, as we began thinking about our September "Close to Home" newsletter and perhaps tying it into the concept of Labor Day, it occurred to us that there's a whole different labor that doesn't have its own day of celebration: the labor of love each of us expends to make and keep our homes something special.

At Your 1 Plumber, we have been entrusted by valued customers like you to help maintain and even enhance the comfort, convenience, and safety your home provides. And if there's any one service that best typifies all that, it's our whole-house plumbing inspection. All things considered, we think it's the single most valuable service we offer. That's because it gives us a regular opportunity to check on all of your indoor and outdoor plumbing to help ensure everything is running exactly as it should be.

Improve the Efficiency of Your Water Heater.

Reduce the temperature to 120 degrees, wrap it in a water-heater insulating blanket and insulate the first 3 to 6 feet of hot and cold water pipes.

In fact, here are just a few examples of what our whole-house plumbing inspection includes:

Sinks, tubs and showers – Regular inspections can identify hidden leaks and drainage problems as well as mineral or corrosive deposits that can constrict water flow. If left undetected for too long, expensive damage can occur and repairs might be needed.

Toilets – Cracks, leaks and loose fittings can eventually happen over time; identifying them early can alleviate the need for more expensive repairs later. Flappers should be inspected, and often replaced, regularly. If they are working improperly, you can lose up to 200 gallons of water every day!

Water heaters – Traditional tank water heaters are responsible for a large amount of energy consumption. Tanks should be regularly checked for leaks and sediment buildup at least once a year. For safety, the temperature and pressure valve should also be inspected.

And so, in honor of Labor Day and the labor of love you call your home, we're pleased to offer you our whole-house plumbing inspection service for just $89 with the coupon on page 3 of this newsletter. Call us now to schedule service or click here to book your service call online.

Happy Labor Day, everyone, and we hope to see you soon.
